What is Type 1 Diabetes (T1D)?

Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease that strikes both children and adults suddenly. It has nothing to do with diet or lifestyle. There is nothing you can do to prevent it. And, at present, there is no cure.

In T1D, your pancreas stops producing insulin—a hormone the body needs to get energy from food. This means a process your body does naturally and automatically becomes something that now requires your daily attention and manual intervention. Those living with T1D must constantly monitor their blood-sugar level, inject or infuse insulin through a pump, and carefully balance insulin doses with food and activity throughout the day and night.

Insulin is not a cure for diabetes. Even with the most vigilant disease management, a significant portion of the day is spent with either high or low blood-sugar levels. These fluctuations place people with T1D at risk for potentially life-threatening hypoglycemic and hyperglycemic episodes as well as devastating long-term complications such as kidney failure, heart attack, stroke, blindness and amputation.
